1. Sales Trend by Outlet Establishment Year

Year-over-Year Sales ($K)

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022
Sales	$78K	$130K	$131K	$132K	$132K	$133K	$205K	$131K	$129K	$130K	$131K

Observations

- 2018 contributed 14.7% of cumulative establishment-year sales — the strongest single year.
- Years 2014–2017 show remarkable consistency around $131K–$133K.
- Post-peak years (2019–2022) hold steady, suggesting saturation of new-outlet contribution.

5. Insights & Recommendations

Key Insights

Channel concentration risk	Supermarket Type1 drives 65.5% of revenue. Over-reliance on a single channel exposes the business to outlet-level risk.
Tier 3 outperforms	Tier 3 cities generate $472K — 40% more than Tier 1. Smaller markets show stronger demand density.
Stable ratings	Average rating is uniformly 4.0 across all outlet types — quality consistency is a strength.
Product concentration	Top 4 categories (Fruits, Snacks, Household, Frozen) generate ~52% of all item sales.
2018 cohort effect	Outlets established in 2018 contribute disproportionately ($205K), suggesting a successful expansion vintage worth replicating.

Recommendations

R1	Diversify channel mix. Invest in Supermarket Type2/3 and Grocery Store formats to reduce dependence on Type1. Target +5pp share from non-Type1 outlets in next 12 months.
R2	Double down on Tier 3. Allocate 40%+ of new-outlet capex to Tier 3 cities, where demand-per-outlet is highest.
R3	Expand Low-Fat assortment. Low-Fat share grows with tier (35% overall, rising to ~35.4% in Tier 3). Pilot expanded Low-Fat ranges in metro stores.
R4	Optimise long-tail SKUs. Seafood, Breakfast, Starchy each contribute <$0.02M. Rationalise SKUs or run targeted promotions.
R5	Replicate 2018 playbook. Audit operational/marketing decisions of the 2018 outlet vintage and apply to future cohorts.
